Summary: The Design Trust for Public Space is a not-for-profit organization committed to improving New York City's parks, plazas, streets, and public buildings. Their web site includes projects intended to bring together neighborhoods, public agencies, and design professionals to find innovative opportunities for change to make the city more sustainable, functional, and available to all. The organization assists public agencies and community groups with urban design issues as well as connecting professionals in the various arts and architecture venues with upcoming projects. New Yorkers can find publications and project descriptions and possible venues for which they can provide either useful ideas or support.

The $6 billion lie: why Ratner's fiscal claim is Swiss cheese

Would the Atlantic Yards project bring $6 billion in new revenue to the city and state over 30 years? That's developer Forest City Ratner's mantra, in meetings, in the Brooklyn Standard promotional sheet, and now in a letter (right) they're providing to state legislators in an effort to lobby Assembly Speaker Sheldon Silver. The state budget is supposed to be decided by April 1, and the developer seeks the inclusion of $100 million in state aid promised in a 2005 Memorandum of Understanding, even though the project is still in the early stages of review.

The $6 billion is the biggest lie in the whole Atlantic Yards controversy.

OK, syntactically, it's not a lie. The $6 billion has indeed been estimated in a study FCR commissioned, written by sports economist Andrew Zimbalist. But it's not credible. It results from manipulated statistics, an enormous (and methodologically flawed) overestimate of revenues, and an omission (and then an underestimate) of costs.

The study's conclusions--and FCR's manipulation of them--are challenged in reports by two city agencies and two outside analysts, not to mention an application of some economic common sense.

Here are some glaring flaws in the FCR-paid study. It ignores the cost of traffic and transportation improvements. It claims a new arena wouldn't increase police costs and lowballs other public costs. And, in claiming financial benefits, it relies on the

FEATURED

Community Notice

Permanent changes to the roadway network on Carlton Avenue and Pacific Street beginning on or around September 24, 2012

As part of the transportation improvements related to the Atlantic Yards project, beginning on or around September 24, 2012, weather permitting, the following permanent changes will be made to the roadway network:

Carlton Avenue (between Atlantic Avenue and Pacific Street only) will re-open to vehicular traffic as a two-way roadway. Vehicles will be able to access this block from eastbound and westbound Atlantic Avenue and will be able to make left and right turns from Carlton Avenue onto Atlantic Avenue at this location.

Directly following the reopening of Carlton Avenue, Pacific Street (between Carlton Avenue and Sixth Avenue only) will change from one-way westbound to a two-way roadway.

Please see attached flyer for map and more information.

EMPLOYMENT INFORMATION

For the week ending July 29, there were a total of 1104 workers building Atlantic Yards. The daily average was 880 workers. 656 were New York City residents, with 256 from Brooklyn and 85 from the four community boards adjacent to the project. For more information about job availability and to view job postings, please click here. To view the Barclays Center Hiring Plan presentation, click here.

CONSTRUCTION

September 24, 2012

As of this morning at 9 am, the Carlton Avenue Bridge is open. On or around Thursday, September 27, Pacific Street between Carlton and Sixth Avenues will open.

September 10, 2012

The latest two-week construction look-ahead has been posted by ESDC.

September 10, 2012

Removal of the grass strip on the north side of Pacific Street between 6th and Carlton Avenues will not be completed at this time, as had been reported in the previous Construction Alert, because of work related to the LIRR yard that will be performed January 2013 through December 2013. The sidewalk will be replaced in sections as the work progresses. In the interim, the area will be cleaned and replaced with mulch.

September 10, 2012

Median work at Carlton and Atlantic Avenues will begin on September 7th and will be completed during this reporting period. The MPT along Atlantic Avenue will be shifted to allow for median restoration work.

September 10, 2012

A soft opening of the station entrance is tentatively scheduled for on or about September 17th.

550 Vanderbilt

Meticulously crafted by COOKFOX, 550 Vanderbilt revitalizes everyday living with contemporary ease. Inspired by the architecture of the neighborhood, the building's solid masonry references the borough's past while large windows provide a view on its bustling future. For information about this condominium building and availability, visit 550vanderbilt.com.

461 Dean

Developed by Forest City Ratner Companies, 461 Dean is the tallest modular building in the world—just one way Pacific Park is making history. This 32-story tower designed by SHoP Architects will be a boon to the neighborhood with 4,000 square feet of retail at its base and half of the 363 residences designated affordable. For information about this building and availability, visit 461dean.com.

535 Carlton

Designed by COOKFOX, this 18 story residence will bring 298 affordable homes to low-, moderate- and middle-income New Yorkers. Rooftop farming, outdoor amenities, and living space will support a thriving community. The affordable housing lottery for 535 Carlton is now open and the building is scheduled to open in 2017. ## Update

In January 2016 the de Blasio Administration – to the great consternation and outrage of the affected communities – reached a closed-door agreement with the tourist helicopter industry to extend its lease for the Downtown Manhattan Heliport another five years and to eliminate the City’s right to terminate the lease within that period.

While it reduces the number of flights by January 2017 from 60,000 to 30,000 and bans all

What is the BQX? -

The BQX is a new, state-of-the-art streetcar system being planned by the City of New York. The BQX will be efficient and emissions-free and it will run on tracks flush with the existing roadway. Possible without overhead catenary wires or underground power sources, it will also be resilient against major weather and flood events. BQX trains will be ADA accessible and will accommodate bicycle parking.

Collaborative Architecture, Urbanism, and Sustainability Web Archive (CAUSEWAY)

Collected by: Ivy Plus Libraries

Archived since: Jun, 2014

Description: The Collaborative Architecture, Urbanism, and Sustainability Web Archive (CAUSEWAY) is a newly launched initiative by the art and architecture librarians at Brown, Columbia, Cornell, Dartmouth, Johns Hopkins, Harvard, Princeton, and Yale universities, MIT, and the universities of Chicago and Pennsylvania, under the auspices of Columbia University Libraries and Information Services. This project aims to preserve websites devoted to the related topics of architecture, urban fabric, community development activism, public space and sustainability in order to guarantee the continuing availability of these important but potentially ephemeral documents for researchers and scholars.
