Japan's devastating earthquake in pictures

Houses are swept up by a tsunami near Sendai Airport after an earthquake on March 11, 2011. (Mainichi) Click photo for more.

TOKYO (AP) -- A powerful tsunami spawned by the largest earthquake in Japan's history slammed the eastern coast Friday, sweeping away boats, cars, homes and people as widespread fires burned out of control. A local news report said at least 15 people were killed.

The magnitude 8.9 offshore quake was followed by at least 19 aftershocks, most of them of more than magnitude 6.0. Dozens of cities and villages along the 2,100-kilometer stretch of the country's eastern shore were shaken by violent tremors that reached as far away as Tokyo, hundreds of kilometers from the epicenter in the sea off the northeastern coast.

Fukushima zone fully redesignated

08 August 2013

Preparations can begin for residents to return to the town of Kawamata near the damaged Fukushima Daiichi nuclear power plant. The town was the final evacuated municipality to be redesignated.

Separate from the evacuation area defined by a 20 kilometre radius from Fukushima Daiichi, the area near Kawamata was evacuated once it was known that radioactive particles had been carried by the wind from the damaged power plant. While limited access to the town has been permitted, Japan's Ministry of Economy, Trade and Industry (METI) has now announced that controls on entry to most of Kawamata town, northwest of the plant, have been relaxed today.

Industry Talk

Indian sub goes critical

The reactor on India's first indigenous nuclear submarine, launched in 2009, has achieved criticality. Indian prime minister Manmohan Singh has issued a message congratulating all those associated with the INS Arihant project.

New head for Stuk

Petteri Tiippana has been appointed as the next director general of Finland's nuclear regulator, the Radiation and Nuclear Safety Authority (Stuk). Having previously worked at the US Nuclear Regulatory Commission, he joined Stuk in 2009 as director of its nuclear reactor regulation department. Tiippana succeeds Tero Varjoranta, who leaves to head the International Atomic Energy Agency's safeguards department.

Mithivirdi gets coastal OK

Coastal regulators have approved the construction of intake channels, outflow tunnels, a jetty and desalination plant near Mithivirdi in India's Gujarat state, finding no ecological concerns. Nuclear Power Corporation of India Ltd plans to build six AP1000 pressurized water reactors there.

Conflagration of South Ossetia: Towards a Russian-Georgian War

By Nicolas Landru

Following the Georgian offensive on the night of August 8, 2008 in the Separatist Republic of South Ossetia, this part of the Caucasus seems to be ablaze. After a half day of an offensive flash from the Georgian army, which had initially taken over numerous positions, Russia conspicuously entered into the combat to assist Ossetian separatist militias, putting the conflict on a track towards a Russian-Georgian war....

Russia 'ends Georgia operation'

Russian President Dmitry Medvedev has ordered an end to military operations against Georgia, the Kremlin says.

He told officials that the safety of Russian citizens and peacekeepers in South Ossetia had been restored.

Russia also backed an EU plan to end the five-day-old conflict.

Envoys will now try to get Georgian approval.

Each side continues to accuse the other of breaking ceasefire accords, and analysts warn that the two remain far apart on a number of issues.

US Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice said it was vital that all sides cease firing, adding that Russian military operations "really do now need

Only days before south Sudan celebrates its independence from Khartoum, fighting that has targeted military and civilians alike is overshadowing the euphoria. Tensions are high. Khartoum's military has occupied Abyei, a disputed province in the centre of the country. To the north in oil-producing South Kordofan, Khartoum and its proxy militias are targeting the indigenous Nuba people, who occasionally fought on the side of the south during
